THE NATIONAL GUARD AND NATIONAL GOVERNMENT

By Lieut. SAMUEL A. BOYLE, Jr. Commissary Third Infantry

IT IS pleasing to note that since the last article was published, I have received many letters from National Guardsmen, and while they have not all agreed with me concerning the remedies, they have unmistakably admitted the evils of the present system, and have been unanimous in the opinion that the future use of the Volunteer Guard would depend upon the adoption by Congress of some plan which would bring it under the National Administration and control. I have been informed that such a bill would be introduced during the next session of Congress, and that its success was, in a measure, assured, since it would have the hearty support of President Roosevelt.

In order to be successful in its application, the provisions must be in proportion to the needs. No half-way policy, or the co-operation of the Volunteer and Regular Army will simplify the problem. Congress for once must bury its political dickerings and prejudices and decide fearlessly—whether or not the Militia shall be nationalized or remain in its present state. In the absence of well defined Federal legislation on this subject, it will be equally impossible to secure uniformity in the Militia of the country through State legislation as it has been to secure some uniformity in our divorce laws through the same channels. An investigation of national legislation on the subject of Militia satisfies lawyers and laymen alike that there can be no diversity of opinion as to the present extent of Federal authority over Militia. The principal Act now on the Statute Books is that of 1792—concerning the organization, arming and disciplining of the Militia. Since 1792, after considerable debate and opposition, two Acts have been introduced and passed, one increasing the annual appropriation to $200,000, and another to $400,000.

A section of the Revised Statutes also provides a system of disciplining and field exercise to be observed in corps of regular infantry, artillery and riflemen, and, at the same time, provides that they shall apply to corresponding corps in the militia. This provision is, however, inoperative and dead so far as the militia is concerned, as the lack of uniformity in the equipment and disciplining of the militia is notorious.

The organization of the National Guard is almost as varied and different as the States themselves. Some States have a two-battalion organization and others have three. One State has one kind of rifle and another State has an entirely different make. Several weak attempts have been made in Congress to correct this lack of uniformity and regularity in the State Militia, but so far none have been prolific of results, and only last year an amendment was favored by a majority of the Committee on Militia, which, in the event of its adoption, would have hurried along the inevitable control by the Federal Government of the Militia. The unsavory part of this proposal was the attempt to hide its real purposes and objects under an increased appropriation to the different States, while in reality, if adopted, it would have given the Federal Government additional authority and power over the Militia. The amendment provided that in consideration of certain other appropriations to the Militia, the Secretary of War might prescribe regulations as to enlistments, equipments and discipline, and he was also empoweed from time to time to detail officers for duties as inspectors of the Militia as he might deem necessary. In the opinion of many, however, this suggestion does not go far enough, nor does it contain the basic principle of the reformation or needed legislation which is now admitted as necessary even in high and influential circles.

The diversity of uniformity in the Militia of the various States is made apparent by the constant efforts on the part of the War Department to get complete reports from the State National Guards. The more important States have their Guards in good condition and they make reports at times very promptly and intelligently, but it has been at all times impossible to get complete reports from all States and Territories, because, in most of them, inadequate appropriations are made for the maintenance, consequently the officers are lacking in spirit and have not the knowledge to make reports of the Guard. In 1898 we find the nearest approach to a full report of the organized Militia of the United States, and this was secured only by the War Department detailing officers to visit the various States in order to ascertain as to their condition, etc. In addition to detailing regular officers for this work, a series of questions was addressed to the Adjutant Generals of the States and Territories. It required, however, nearly two years to get replies from these interrogatories, the last one having been received as late as June 15, 1900. It is maintained that if the Militia was a provisional part of the Regular Army, this essential information would always be in the possession of the War Department at Washington.

Official:

REORGANIZATION OF THE NAVAL MILITIA.

1. The Navy Department believes it desirable to form a National Naval Reserve, and with this end in view proposes, in case of the passage of the necessary legislation, to suggest to the President of the United States regulations for its establishment.

2. The complete details of the project have not been definitely formulated. In general, however, it contemplates the following provisions:

The enrollment of officers and men from the naval militia, the merchant marine, yacht squadrons, and from those who have been connected with a seafaring life. Compensation based upon the pay of corresponding grades and rates in the naval service, with traveling expenses to and from home to the vessels to which they may be ordered for the annual tour of drill and instruction. Officers of the naval militia reserve commanding merchant vessels to be permitted, under certain rules, to fly a special flag.

3. Pending legislative action, the Department desires to ascertain the number of men who would likely consent to enrollment, together with the positions they would probably be able to fill. But no steps toward actual enrollment can be taken until after the legislative action, with the President's approval.

4. With this end in view, the Depatment invites the commanding officers of the naval militia of your State, through you, to furnish it with lists of men in your organization, or any others outside of it, who may be considered suitable for enrollment in the National Naval Reserve, and who would probably consent to become members of such reserve, together with the grade or rating in which each would be willing to serve.

5. One requisite for this reserve would be either naval service during the Spanish-American War, three years service in a naval militia organization or a reasonable service afloat in merchant or other vessels.

Our Naval Force on the U. S. S. Shearwater.

LIEUTENANT JOSEPH W. ADAMS.

Lieutenant Joseph W. Adams, the popular and well-known Commissary of the Fourth Infantry, enlisted in the Guard October 27, 1899, in Company "D," and was appointed First Lieutenant and Regimental Commissary November 28, 1899. His services during the coal riots in the fall of 1900 at Shenandoah and Tamaqua were invaluable, and on several occasions Colonel O'Neill was complimented upon having such an efficient staff.

Lieutenant Adams is a descendant of a long line of military ancestors, his family being represented in the Indian Wars, Revolutionary War, War of 1812-14, Civil War and the late Spanish-American War, when his brother, Captain Henry Adams, commanded Company "K" of the Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. It is particularly interesting to note that all of Lieutenant Adams's military ancestry served in Pennsylvania troops. His first military education was received at the Hill School, Pottstown, under the able instruction of Colonel Henry Shenton, formerly of the Sixth Infantry. He also attended the Moravian Day School of Bethlehem; afterwards at the Lehigh University.

During the Spanish-American War Lieutenant Adams was very active in assisting his brother to recruit Company "K." At the same time he tendered his services to Governor Hastings, but he was never called upon. His knowledge of the country and the language would have made him peculiarly fitted as a staff officer, he having resided in and near Santiago de Cuba for several years prior to the war, being connected with the Ponupo Mining Company and also treasurer of the Ferro-Carril de Santiago de Cuba. Lieutenant Adams's business interests in Cuba make it necessary for him to take frequent trips to the island, and he believes the country is an ideal one, with a great and prosperous future before it.

He is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York, Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revotion and Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution.

THE photographs of Lieutenant J. Franklin McFadden and Colonel A. Loudon Snowden, illustrations of which appeared in the last issue, were taken by F. Gutekunst.

THE indoor parade and review of the Second Infantry on the evening of December 10th was a very successful affair. The regiment made a very natty appearance in its full dress uniform. The battalion and regimental formations were full of snap and showed great improvement over former events of this kind. The amalgamated band and field music was superb, and we should like to see every regiment in the State have a musical organization of this kind.

COLONEL ALBERT J. LOGAN, who is likely to be the successor of Captain Wallace, in command of Battery B, when elected, will become the senior artillery officer of the State, and at the coming division encampment will command the provisional battalion of artillery. The present senior is Captain Barclay Harding Warburton, of Battery A, who ranks January 17, 1898. Colonel Logan supersedes this by rank from January 29, 1895. Colonel Logan has been in the Guard for many years and will, no doubt, prove a valuable acquisition to the artillery arm of the State service.

CHELTENHAM MILITARY ACADEMY, located at Ogontz, near Philadelphia, is now one of the foremost military institutions in the country. The corps of instructors is chosen from the ablest of their particular line. Rev. John D. Skilton, A. M., the Principal, is professor of history, and, in addition, is a thorough military disciplinarian, having had considerable experience in the cavalry branch. Major Albert D. Sayen, the military commandant, is a graduate of West Point and is bringing about very excellent results. He is also teacher of higher mathematics.

SECOND TROOP, Philadelphia City Cavalry, under command of Captain Frank Earle Schermerhorn, made a very creditable appearance on Sunday, December 15, when they paraded fifty men, in full dress uniform, as Guard of Honor to the State Society of the Cincinnati of Pennsylvania, who held service in memory of their late president, Hon. William Wayne, at the North Broad Street Presbyterian Church. The writer had an opportunity of hearing many favorable comments on the soldierly bearing and fine showing made by our Junior Cavalry organization.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM C. WALLACE, who recently resigned his commission as Captain of Battery B to give his entire attention to his medical practice, was evidently a very much discouraged officer before leaving the Guard, as will be seen by extracts taken from a recent letter received.

"I regret very much to leave the Battery, but there was simply too much to look after and practice medicine at the same time. The Battery is in good shape and everything moving along nicely. I should like to see every officer in the Guard in Pittsburg resign. Allegheny county, with its immense business interests, does not deserve a National Guard, as they give it no encouragement. They won't do anything in regard to an armory, and we are, at the present time, located in an old stable. It would bankrupt such a monopoly as the Philadelphia Company to give light or fuel gratuitously. The Bell Telephone Company looked on me as a beggar when I had the audacity to ask them for the free service of a telephone for the Battery. What do you think of that for Pittsburg?"

Personal Mention

Major Morris F. Cawley, surgeon of the Fourth Infantry, has been laid up with a severe attack of grip.

Captain Charles D. Rhoades, of the Fourth Infantry, is still confined to the house with blood poisoning.

Sergeant Major W. Preston Tyler, of the First Brigade staff, has opened a vocal studio in the Fuller Building, Philadelphia, where he will be glad to see his many friends.

Lieutenant Walter M. Hotz will shortly enter the United States Cavalry service. He is well posted in military matters and should pass a very successful examination for second lieutenant.

NOTES

Hampton Battery B had a "red letter night" Monday evening, December 16th, when they held their annual "bean-bake," which was largely attended by their many friends.

The officers' rooms in the new administration building have been furnished, and present a handsome appearance, and will be a comfortable home for the officers of the regiment to welcome their brother officers and friends.

The Athletic Association of the Second Regiment has fitted up a wire cage in the gymnasium for the use of the basket ball teams. Great enthusiasm has been aroused, and the teams are receiving the general support of the regiment.

First Sergeant Howard W. Aikens, of Company G, was elected First Lieutenant of his company on December 4. He gave a supper to the company in honor of the election on December 14.

Battalion drills at the Second Regiment Armory have been very largely attended, and it is gratifying to the battalion and company commanders to note the good attendance and general appearance of the men at these drills.

The competitive military drill held at the Sportsman's Exposition, Philadelphia, on Monday evening, December 16th, was a very creditable affair. Of the six companies of infantry entering the contest but two reported, F (Captain Lamont) and G (Captain Machold) of the Third, thereby winning first and second prizes.

The Pullman parlor car "Olivia," running on the Philadelphia and Reading-Jersey Central flyer, between Philadelphia and Scranton, is the car which the Pullman Company sent to Washington for the use of the President to take him to his home on Long Island to vote on election day. The entire equipment of this new train is the very finest that can be obtained.

The reception of Company I, Third Infantry, at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, on Wednesday evening, January 15th, promises to be the military reception of the season in the State. Prominent officials from adjoining states as well as army and naval officers of the regular establishment will be in attendance. The feature of the evening will be an exhibition drill by the State naval forces, under command of Lieutenant Russell. This is the first exhibition drill given by the "naval boys" and it will, doubtless, bring great credit upon our State Navy.

Sheridan Troop, commanded by Major Charles S. W. Jones, qualified sixty men and three officers with the carbine. There are four classes of marksmen for the carbine-sharpshooters, first-class, second-class and third-class. Last year one of their members made a sharpshooter's score; this year they succeeded in putting two men through, Trooper V. C. Addleman, with a total score of 66, and Corporal James F. Moore, with a total of 64. To qualify with the carbine as a sharpshooter, 62 points are required out of a possible 75, at a distance of 200, 500 and 600 yards.

Company C, Fifth Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, has organized two basket ball teams. The teams are composed entirely of enlisted men of the organizations, who will practice weekly games in the armory during the wintry months. It is proposed to enter and challenge other basket ball teams to games to be played in the armory or elsewhere, if desired. The teams compose the following members: No. 1 Team—Howard E. Evans, Joseph F. Reed, Earl D. Ashcom, George B. Kelly, Fred A. Delozier and Samuel R. Beswick. No. 2 Team—Charles W. Fisher, Ed. T. Trout, Homer McKillip, John W. Riggs, H. E. Rodkey and Philip A. Storm.

The consolidated marksmanship records for the Fifth Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, have been compiled and show a total number of 435 qualified marksmen out of a strength of 487. The marksmen are classed into four shooters, 104 first class, 298 second class and 29 third class marksmen. The remaining fifty-two men failed to make the necessary score. Lieutenant Colonel R. C. Elder, of Lewistown, holds the record for the longest consecutive qualification, having nineteen years to his credit. Major A. S. Stayer stands second with seventeen years, and Captain Hughes, of Indiana, third, with sixteen years. Lieutenant Smith, of Johnstown, has qualified twenty years, but not consecutively. In addition to the rifle scores, twenty of the officers and non-commissioned staff officers qualified with the revolver.

Mr. Sayre's Office, Adjoining the Library

The esteem in which he is held can best be understood when it is known that Sayreton, Alabama, and Sayre, in Oklahoma Territory, have been named in his honor. The national emblems waving over these places, as well as the Methodist College at Birmingham, were presented by Mr. Sayre.

It has been his custom for many years to have an annual flag these occasions is the singing of the "Battle Cry of Freedom" while young and old rally 'round the flag. This is usually followed by the Children's Jubilee, when frolic, fireworks and music are indulged in.

For many years Mr. Sayre was one of the officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and during the trying times of the Civil War he was more than once called upon to perform arduous duties in conveying troops safely through the State of Pennsylvania to the seat of war. On one of these occasions he made the personal acquaintance of General Winfield Scott.

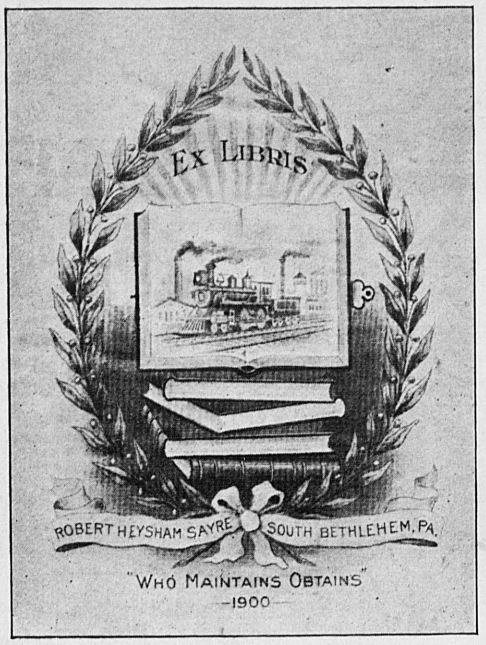
During the recent Spanish-American War he showed his great love and devotion to the American cause by encouraging men in his locality to volunteer and assisting their families during their absence.

Another of his noble acts is the opening of his magnificent library to the general public. The interior, which is illustrated on pages 10 and 11, is absolutely fireproof, and contains 8,000 volumes of rare ancient and modern works. Among Mr. Sayre's prized volumes are the personal memoirs of Abraham Lincoln, of whom he was a great admirer. These contain some of the finest pen sketches in existence. This library cost Mr. Sayre over $100,000, and is one of the finest in the State.



THE SAYRE CREST

He was Chief Engineer during the construction of the Lehigh Valley railroad, between 1852 and 1855; then Chief Engineer and General Superintendent until 1883; Chief Engineer and President of the South Pennsylvania Railroad (Vanderbilt's), between 1882 and 1885; then back to the Lehigh Valley as Second Vice-President, having supervision of the engineering and the transportation of their various lines until about four years ago.

He was also one of the projectors of the Bethlehem Iron Company and a Director from 1862; General Manager in 1886; first contract with the Army Department for heavy breech-loading rifles, and with the Navy Department, heavy ship armor, in 1887, the contract aggregating over $4,400,000. He continued acting manager after his election to the vice-presidency in 1891, and remained in the service until about 1897.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN P. PENNEY

Mother of Lieut. Col. John P. Penney

Mrs. John P. Penney, one of the oldest residents of the county, died yesterday morning at her residence, No. 716 North avenue, West Allegheny. She had been ill for a few days, but her condition gave no cause for alarm. Her death came more from the natural causes incident to her advanced age than anything else. Mrs. Penney was a member of a family that settled here in the early days of the county. She was the daughter of James and Margaret Gilfillan Greer, and was born in 1825 on her father's farm, in what was then Upper St. Clair township, but is now the borough of West Elizabeth. While she was still an infant her father moved to Allegheny, where the rest of his life was passed. In 1844 she married John F. Quigg, of the firm of Jones & Quigg, whose steel mill at the foot of Ross street was the pioneer establishment of its class in Pittsburg. Mr. Quigg died in 1855. In 1862 she married the Hon. John P. Penney, who was speaker of the Senate of Pennsylvania during the troublesome times of the Civil War. Mr. Penney died in 1873. Mrs. Penney was the mother of eight children, of whom two survive. They are Mr. S. G. Penney, of the Eagle Paint and Varnish Company, and Col. John P. Penney, the real estate dealer, who is Division Inspector of the National Guard of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Penney was a devout and active Christian. She was raised in the First United Presbyterian Church of Allegheny, under the charge of Dr. Pressley, and was a life member of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of that denomination. During Mr. Penney's life the family resided in Homewood, and she was connected with the East Liberty Presbyterian Church. After his death she returned to Allegheny, where she since made her home, and was actively connected with the North Presbyterian Church.

Pampanga has an area of about 2,208 square kilometers, inhabited by 223,902 registered people. The great majority of these are Pampangos, a peculiar and distinguished race among all of those in the archipelago. There are a few Ilocanos; in the mountains there are some Negritos or Aetas, called Balugas in the language of Pampanga.

The capital is Bacolor, situated on a plane on the right bank of the River Betis, and has a population of 17,100. It has some well-constructed houses, such as the church, the convent, the government house, and the magnificent court-house. It has a simple monument erected to the memory of Anda y Salazar. There are other towns which compare favorably with the capital in population and in the number and beauty of its buildings, such as San Fernando, Lubao, Arayat, Macabebe, San Luis, Mexico, and Candaba, which each have more than 14,000 inhabitants; Apalit, Mabalacat, which exceed 1,000 each; Angeles, Guagua, Magalang, which exceed 9,000 each; Porac, San Simon, and Santa Ana, which exceed 7,000, and, finally, Betis, Santa Rita, Santo Tomas, and Minalin, which each have more than 5,000 inhabitants. There is a total of 25 towns, 328 villages, and 297 hamlets.

Pampango, their own language, is used exclusively in the province. The few natives of other races in the province, and also the Balugas, who come down to the towns to trade, understand and speak Pampango.

The principal products of the province are sugar, rice, corn, some indigo, sweet potatoes, gabe, tobacco, and cotton. The value of these products is estimated at $1,210,000, more or less. Woods are scarce; nevertheless the towns of Floridablanca, Porac, Magalang, and Arayat produce some, and their value, with bamboo and palms, reaches $182,380. There are no mines. Statistics in regard to industries were as follows a few years ago: Steam machinery for evaporating sugar, 1; alcohol stills, 8; sugar mills, hydraulic, 31; steam, 177; handpower, 445; stone mills, 365; pottery factories, 9; looms, 12,577; belt factories, 1; carriage shops, 15; shoe shops, 6; carpenter shops, 8. In Bacolor, San Fernando, Guagua, Angeles, Apalit, and Arayat wholesale and retail groceries exist, and in San Fernando and Guagua, drug stores. In all the towns of the province carriages may be hired. Commerce is carried on in manufactured nipa, firewood (called bacuan), sugar, honey, indigo, woods, sacks, sleeping mats, lime, tobacco, and rice. Grazing is an industry very much neglected in this province, not because of lack of land, but on account of the lack of pasturage. Fisheries are of value, and if in this province this branch has not reached the point of importance that it has in other provinces, it is growing, and has a value already of $13,950. And finally it should be added that there exist two telegraph stations—one in San Fernando and one in Bacolor, the first with limited service and the second with complete service, the chief of the line residing in the latter place. To the port of Guagua a steamer runs every day.

The province is divided into two parts—the high and the low—in the first of which the air is very pure and the water excellent, the temperature being cool and healthful. In the lowlands, where rice is by preference grown, there is much humidity, greater heat, and it is less healthful. This is especially true of towns located in sandy regions, these including the principal towns of the province. All of the towns have interior communication by wagon road and paths, and water communication between the towns of Bacolor, Betis, Guagua, Sexinoan, Lubao, San Miguel, Macabebe, Minalin, Santo Tomas, Apalit, San Simeon, San Luis, Arrayat, Candaba, and San Fernando, and also with the provinces of Manila, Cavite, Bulacan, Tarlac, Nueva Ecija, and Batuan; and by the aforesaid wagon roads with the same provinces, with the exception of Cavite. The railroad cuts the province from southeast to northwest, and has been the cause of a notable development of its industry and commerce. The line passes through important towns, such as Apalit, Santo Tomas, San Fernando, Calulut, Angeles, and Mabalacat, near the boundary of Tarlac.
